Dear Joe:

I have been very concerned but at a complete loss to know of anything that I could do regarding [Redacted] the teletypist who lives in Waimea Valley and who spent four hours in a mango tree watching her house and everything in it being swept away by the flood.

STAT

I have explored very briefly whether or not there is anything that could be done to assist an employee in such a predicament, even though you had not indicated that any assistance was needed or desired. I am afraid, however, that there is nothing that CIA could do to relieve the situation if it should be advisable.

I would like, however, for this employee to know that we are concerned about this unfortunate flood and its disastrous effect on her personally. If it were administratively possible, I should be more than glad to help her in whatever way I could.

Sincerely,

L. K. White
